Ukraine

As trade grows Turkey hopes for more investment from Ukraine

Turkey has become one of the top three export destinations for Ukrainian-made goods.

The volume of trade is overwhelmingly in favor of Ukraine, which is an important factor in Turkey increasing its exports there. For the past five years, Turkey has been ranked among the top three export destinations for Ukrainian goods. Today, iron, steel, and scrap metals account for more than 60 percent of total Ukrainian exports to Turkey. The presence of Turkish companies and investments in Ukraine also continues to grow steadily. According to official figures, total Turkish investment in the Ukrainian economy stood at $91 million in April of this year, with a predicated tendency towards further growth continuing in August. The total investment figure may be as high as $1 billion.

Interest in Ukraine continues to grow in Turkey, and many opportunities exist for cooperation in mutual investment projects. Recently, two Turkish banks became operational in Ukraine. Notably, Turkey and Ukraine have started preliminary negotiations for a free trade agreement. These factors are clear signs of an ever closer economic relationship.

Ukraine - a major energy transporter

The geographical position of Ukraine makes it a perfect route for transporting energy from Russia and the Caspian region to the world markets. According to the International Energy Agency, 3.9 trillion cubic feet of Russian gas was shipped through Ukraine to Europe in 2005. In the same year, Ukraine transported 46.7 million tons of oil to the world markets. Such a high export volume makes Ukraine the world's most important hydrocarbon transporting country, and Ukraine sees her energy transport infrastructure as a key strategic asset. However, whether or not Ukraine will be able to remain a major energy transporter in the future is uncertain, as transportation through Ukraine has been falling in recent years. The Energy Information Administration reported that Russian oil exports via Ukraine dropped 15 percent in 2005 as compared with 2004. Ukraine also transported 7.7 billion cubic metres less of gas in 2006 than she did in 2005. There was an 18 percent fall in Russian gas transportation in the first five months of 2007 compared to the same period in 2006.
