OECD: Interest rates to rise to 12% in Turkey by 2008

The Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) has forecasted that the Turkish economy will continue to grow, though the economy remains exposed to domestic and international risks. The OECD stated that exports would be the driving force of the economy and if structural reforms were implemented, the economy could reach a potential growth rate of above 7% per annum. The OECD also pointed out that there has been a slow down in measures taken against inflation. In its report, the OECD stated that inflation is proving 'stickier' than expected suggesting that interest rates will decline slower than otherwise thought. A further prediction is that the present short term interest rate of 17.5 % will decrease to 15% by the end of this year, and to 12% by the end of 2008.

Deutsche Bank: Your Economy is good, politics is delicate

The chief economist of Deutsche Bank Mr. Norbert Walter, while mentioning that from the point of view of international investors there are very few countries that provide both stability and high returns, stated that, "The reality is that Turkey provides a good investment climate." Walter went on to state that the Turkish Economy is very strong however, the political situation is more fragile than compared to 5 years ago. The financial markets have experienced what has happened and what could happen under an AKP government. A different political climate may create uncertainty.

Politics

Gül withdraws his candidacy

The Turkish parliament met for the second time for the election of the new president, but failed to the necessary quorum. The supreme Constitutional court had previously declared that the first attempt to elect a presidential candidate was also void for want of the necessary quorum. The sole presidential candidate Foreign Minister Abdullah Gül announced his withdrawal from the elections, stating "I see no further sense in proceeding with the next session of parliament on 9th May, and therefore I declare the withdrawal of my candidacy for the Presidency.

Parliament convened to carry out the first round of presidential elections. Parliament Speaker Bülent Arınç opened the session and took an electronic roll call in line with the court decision. After two roll calls 10 minutes apart, Arınç closed the session, saying only 356 members were present in the first roll and 358 in the second. The speaker stated that the first round of voting would be repeated on May 9th despite the fact that Abdullah Gül stated that he would withdraw.

CHP and DSP will join forces during the elections

CHP and DSP will form an alliance after the DSP welcomed the call by Deniz Baykal of CHP who stated that they should unite under the CHP. Deniz Baykal stated that the chairman of DSP Sezer had made tremendous contributions to the solution based on an amicable settlement to this national problem, Baykal went on to say, "I feel like I have embraced Ecevit". Zeki Sezer stated that DSP candidates would be included under the CHP parliamentary candidate listings while maintaining their DSP identity, he also stated that he was not going stand as a candidate.

World Press: Secularism shows great force

Hundreds of thousands of Turkish citizens gathered in Gundoğan Square in the republican rallies which had also taken place in the Ankara, Tandoğan and the Çağlayan, in Istanbul. The rally was filled with crowds waving the national flag with people attending from the near by providences and other parts of country. The foreign media reported that "This was the biggest show of force by the Turkish people to date."

Constitutional amendments have been passed by parliament and awaiting President Sezer's approval.

The Turkish Parliament has passed several laws regarding the election of the President by the people, based on a double five year term, In addition, a law stating that elections should be held every four years, and that the quorum should be reduced to 184 members together with adding the independent candidates to the election rosta. The laws were voted on in the Parliament in a secret ballot with a total of 377 votes of which 376 were for and 1 against and. President Sezer's approach will determine the course of the laws passed.
